

Brian López

Hello, my name is Brian Sebastián López Luque, I'm 17 and I'm from Carmen de la Legua district, in the constitutional province of Callao. [I'm here] To tell young women and men in my country that they should work together to change the perspective through which politics in our country is seen. To raise awareness among the youth, since it is ourselves who will elect our next authorities, to see what kind of work they will promote to bring us quality of life.

Our head of State's decision was too much of a radical and respectable political change in the country, but this decision has shown the need to work in coordination to achieve common good.

There's a huge gap in education in our country, the education we are given is too basic. Why is it basic? Because after going through it, we are not prepared to take the next step in our academic life. Education centers will accept capacities, they tag children and adolescents in a very derogatory way and they are not concerned with providing qualification to these young people, the participation of students is not taken into account, thus violating the right to education.

And now to say that not all our provinces count on education centers and if we have them, they don't have good infrastructure, and they aren't inclusive either. We should touch on the subject of sexual education and family planning issues, in order to achieve a better country.